With the death of Commodore (583) the West now became a political & intellectual wasteland.
People had little need for formal civil calendars, with most reverting back to preliterate age when farmers, sailors & merchants measured time in broad cycles where events were triggered by the bloom of a flower or the flight north or south of a flock of birds

Remarkably a few monks and scholars over the coming centuries would keep the mechanism of the Calendar moving.
